

Jens Lund Mosbek

Partner (Copenhagen)

Jens Lund Mosbek specialises in labour and employment law, public law, litigation and arbitration, and conduct of independent legal investigations.

Jens has considerable experience in advising both private businesses and public employers on all aspects of labour and employment law. His specialist expertise includes equity-based pay, pension schemes, managers' legal rights, and the special regulation of public employers.

Over the past 15 years, Jens has acted in a considerable number of litigation and arbitration proceedings, particularly involving issues relating to labour and employment law and public law. He has represented clients in courts and tribunals of all instances and levels, including the European Court of Justice, the Danish Labour Court, as well as industrial, institutional and ad hoc arbitration tribunals.

Jens focuses on establishing an informal and open dialogue with clients, allowing him to provide strategic advice on legal issues, identify potential solutions and recommend the course of action that best meets the client's specific needs. At the same time, his focus is to find the best possible solution for the client in the specific situation.

High-profile cases

Jens has been appointed by the Danish Ministry of Justice as interrogator for the Commission of Inquiry into the affairs of the Danish Tax Agency, and during the active years of the Commission of Inquiry into the Wars in Iraq and Afghanistan, he held the same role in that Commission. In addition, Jens has extensive experience in conducting independent legal investigations and in assisting in internal investigations for both public and private sector clients, most recently an investigation commissioned by the City of Copenhagen concerning allegations about harassing conduct by the former Lord Mayor.

Ratings
