Lasse Vibjerg advises on information technology, contracts and digital regulation.

Lasse specialises in technology and digitisation law, assisting in commercial contract drafting, compliance and dispute management relating to technology utilization, rights and digital regulation. His areas of expertise include emerging technologies such as artificial intelligence (AI), the internet of things (IoT), and the challenges and interfaces arising in this connection, including data protection, privacy, security and liability.

Lasse has a background in IP law and is therefore experienced in advising on complex intellectual property law issues, including trademarks, copyright and marketing law.

Furthermore, he is experienced in providing comprehensive litigation and arbitration services in relation to corporate and commercial matters, including contract law, company law, law of damages, professional liability of advisers and management, and M&A disputes.
