Mette Bull Richmann Graah is an employment and labour law adviser.

Mette has assisted Danish and international clients with employment and labour law advice over several years, helping them navigate complex management issues, negotiate severance agreements, understand employment law in general, and resolve disputes. She routinely handles employment law matters in M&A transactions.

She has extensive experience in drafting incentive programmes and remuneration policies and in advising on the specific rules on employee representation on company boards.

In her work as an employment law adviser, Mette draws on the expertise she gained from her previous work as a company law and M&A specialist.
