Christine Godsk Andersen advises Danish and international clients on competition law, state aid law, procurement law, and foreign direct investments. Christine Godsk Andersen advises Danish and international clients on competition law, state aid law, procurement law, and foreign direct investments.

As a competition law specialist, Christine draws on her background in economics, bridging the gap between the legal and economic aspects of competition law.

She offers all-round advice on the competition law framework applying to agreements between market operators, internal investigations, competition law disputes, and merger control and cooperates with the economists in the team to provide business-oriented solutions.

Christine works with her lawyer colleagues to serve clients in the fields of State aid and procurement law and foreign direct investments.

In her day-to-day work, she relies on her experience as an M&A and financial regulation specialist.
